An eminent and reliable gentleman stated, some time since, that he was with o group of conspirators in Washington elty, just before the time of Mr Lincoln's expected arrival, when one of them received a note, announcing that "Lincoln is in Washington!" The Rebel jumped to his feet and exclaimed, "How DID HE GET THROUGH BALTINGRE?" He was doubtless one of those engaged in the plot,... who had bired villains to assassinate the President elect in his passage through that mobocratic city. Gen. Scott obtained secret knowledge of the plan in time to warn Mr. Lincoln, who, passing through in advance, unannounced, frustrated all their design.

It was a deep-laid plan to murder the President, then to cut off Washington city from the North by seizing Baltimore (as was shortly done) when the 30,000 troops under arms in the South could seine and hold our Capital, claim foreign recognition, possess all the machinery of government, and thus effect disunion, or you put him at.
